

Unsolicited telephone calls were coming into our house at all times of the day, including weekends. After we get home from work we need some down time which was constantly interrupted by unimportant calls. The ultimate indignity was to have to wait until the actual caller clicked on the line. The men in my house showed a decided lack of patience and would disconnect, but, I, on the other hand would wait it out because I am courteous to a fault. Due to our professions we receive a lot of work related calls and we're not in the mood for idle chitchat. We never buy anything over the phone because we are wary of scams so enlighten me please as to "our obligation" to give credence to people who have nothing of value to say to us. Please spare us the calls and the many messages left on our answering machine. Thank you for your consideration of our complaints.
